EFFORTS TO BETTER SWINE DEPARTMENT

Superintendent Kay Sending Out Circular Letter to Farmers, Urging Them to Enter Stock.

W. H. Kay, superintendent of the swine department of the territorial fair, is making earnest efforts to have his department bigger and better this year than ever before. Not only is he interviewing swine breeders and urging them to enter their best stock, but he is sending out a circular letter to the farmers of the valley. His letter, which is self-explanatory, follows:

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 7, 1910.
Dear Sir: Knowing that you are a breeder of swine, and interested in the promotion of this branch of stock raising, I wish to call your attention to the prize offered this year in this department of the Territorial Fair. A premium list has been sent you.

Last year we had a larger exhibit than ever before, but there was still room for more prize winners. One exhibitor alone took $181 in prizes in this department; another $149.50, another $126.50; $25.50 was the smallest amount taken by any exhibitor. So you can readily see that by exhibiting this year your remuneration will not be merely the reward for patriotism; the financial results are worth striving for.

In the past, breeders have not displayed as much interest in this department as would be warranted by the grade of hogs which are produced in this valley, and I hope that this year you will be among the prize winners. You will, by beginning now, have ample time to get your animals in shape. Carry 'em up and get in line. Yours very truly,

W. H. KAY,
Dept. Sup.

CHINESE ARE BOOMING MERCHANTS

The city of Kirin in Manchuria is a great industrial and trading center and the head of steam navigation on the Sungari river. Two new steamers are now being built by the government for the traffic on this river. Communication with Kuangchenste on the South Manchurian railway line will also be soon established. When the Antung-Mukden railway will be completed Japan intends connecting Kirin with the Korean railway system, thereby gathering into her own hands the agricultural products, i. e., the whole harvest of the finest and richest parts of Manchuria.

To induce foreigners other than Russian or Japanese, to settle in Kirin the government is marking out the limits of an international settlement. It is situated outside the east wall and will be two miles in length by one broad. Offices of the Imperial Maritime Customs were opened in the city in the early part of the year. A constitutional assembly hall is already erected and has cost 50,000 taels. Schools are being built with all possible haste and are largely attended. The students have imbibed the new patriotic spirit and show everywhere a marked hatred of Japan. Owing to their agitation a boycott is still maintained against Japanese goods.

To resist the influx of foreign settlers (that is, from Russia and Japan)—in Manchuria, the Chinese government has recently started an emigration movement, principally to the north and northeastern parts of the country. In these regions frontier towns are springing up with the mushroom rapidity of American cities in the Far West. Many places destroyed during the Boxer crisis have now a Chinese population three times as numerous as before. The government encourages these settlers against Russia and Japan. They are generally reserve soldiers, and being trained to bear arms will prove helpful in all cases of trouble with the new invading element.

To enable them to settle quickly a loan is advanced for traveling expenses, first sowing of seed and initial outlay. Within ten years the government has to pay to the new government all these advances. This emigration movement shows that China is wide awake to the danger and needs of the movement in Manchuria and is firmly resolved to hold her own against all outsiders who may wish to settle within her frontiers and exploit her wealth for their own purposes. America has her racial and economic problems. These hit race and labor must be protected against the "yellow peril." China, on the other side of the Pacific, is confronted with the same problems in Manchuria and puts into practice the lesson given by the States.—American.

FATTENING THE TURKEY.

Some Helpful Hints to Those Engaged in the Business.

As the holidays approach the following advice relative to the fattening of turkeys, taken from the Weekly Star Farmer, may be helpful to some of our readers:

Corn is the prime factor in feeding turkeys to fatten them, while it may be well to give them some other variety of food, such as a mash consisting of wheat, bran, corn, and meat meal. Corn is of course, the pre-eminent ration for fattening all kinds of stock, as it will put on fat much quicker and easier than any other grain known, hence corn should be fed liberally to the young turkeys intended for market purposes.

The time required for the fattening of turkeys will of course vary somewhat as to the way in which they are fed. Really, when the time arrives for fattening them, I consider it only a finishing process, as I always strive to have them in good condition, only needing finishing for the market.

When they are thus handled, if you will provide plenty of good sharp grit, and fresh water about two or three weeks of liberal feeding or corn, with an occasional feed of soft foods, is ample time to finish turkeys for the best markets. However it is necessary to begin thinking of the matter well in advance to have them in good shape to take on the finishing touch rapidly.

As a rule, when we first begin feeding corn we feed it on the ear until the turkeys become accustomed to the high feeding.

Then after we have our turkeys well on the corn ration we shell the corn and feed them all they will eat of it. When our birds are well fattened they are marketed at once, for we have found it a dangerous thing to hold the birds for higher prices as they cannot stand long after they are well fattened under high feeding.

We have learned that if turkeys are retained very long after they are well fattened they are liable to contract diseases which would mean death to a number of them and entailing a loss, perhaps of the greatest number of them. Therefore, we consider it much wiser to market turkeys as rapidly as they are finished and fattened.

All the more so in fact all and any insects that can possibly be provided for them—seem to agree with them, developing mighty giants of them.

We have found it best to give the turkeys liberal range and avoid confining them when being fed heavily on home-grown cereals. It seems to be the nature of turkeys to have liberal and free access to all natural surroundings. They will not wander far away when fed all they require, yet they seem to prefer to be at liberty to wander at their leisure over the hillsides and along streams in search of worms and creeping insects.

It might be well to remember that it is the natural foods fed to turkeys that grow them to the enormous size they now attain. If it were possible to feed turkeys after frost comes all the fat, juicy worms they desired, just as they find them over the fields, it would be surprising to see quite a different turn of body. He would indeed be fattened, and of larger frame and bone than those furnished with corn or other artificial foods. However, that is hardly practicable, hence the necessity of using corn and other cereals.

Bring them up to within about three weeks of marketing time and then feed them heavily for at least two weeks, when they should be promptly marketed, so as to avoid any possible losses, as a loss now does not only mean a loss of poultry, but also of feed and time as well, just at the time when well-finished turkeys mean several dollars to the owner.

The time is rapidly approaching when they will need fattening, and the sooner steps are taken for the same, the better shape they will be in when you want to market them.

THANKSGIVING.

Alan had played the entire day with Little Brother without an impatient word. After saying his customary prayer that night his mother suggested that he say: "I thank God I was not impatient with Little Brother today." This he did with much fervency, after which he remarked that there were some other things he would like to thank God for, and forthwith he closed his eyes and said:

"I thank God I offered my candy to father before taking any myself."
"I thank God I offered my candy to mother before taking any myself."
"I thank God I offered my candy to Little Brother before taking any myself."
"And I thank God there was some left."—Lippincott's.

Living Inexpensive In New York

At Least One of the City's Leading Hotels Affords Every Comfort
at Moderate Rates.

Something About Grand Hotel and New Annex.

That it is "expensive to stop in New York" has been accepted as truth by some people so long that to many it has come to be almost an axiom. Nothing could really be farther from the real facts—provided you know where to stay. To be centrally located, to dine well, to be roomed properly and to pay a fair price, all these are yours, if you go to the Grand Hotel with its fine New Annex, on Broadway at Thirty-first Street.

Not only are the wants of the inner man carefully supplied, but every convenience and comfort to make guests want to come again will be found. Fifty large light sample rooms are provided for commercial travelers. Coupled with the comfortable home-like, restful furnishings and the splendid service all prices are extremely reasonable.

A fine club breakfast may be had as low as 25 cents, and a splendid Table d'Hôte dinner is served for $1.25, or with wine $1.50.

Large single rooms are as low as $1.50 per day—rooms with private bath or sumptuously furnished suites at equally reasonable rates. Both the Grand and its New Annex are absolutely fireproof and strictly modern in every way. Ladies traveling alone will find perfect safety and unusual comfort here.

Send your name and address on a postal card and you will receive free a guide to New York (with maps). Address George F. Hurlbert, President and General Manager.

During the summer Mr. Hurlbert also conducts the far famed Greenhurst hotel on Lake Chautauque, which is open from May 1st to Nov. 1st, for fishing and automobile parties as well as nature lovers.
